43. Read the following passage and answer the questions :

*

The Earth is known as a 'watery planet' because it is the only planet of the solar system containing water in abundance. The presence of life on our plane is mainly due to water and air. More than two-thirds of the Earth's surface is covered with water. Oceans contain about 97% of the total water available on the Earth's surface. The fresh water found in the form of snow and ice on the ground and water in lakes and rivers accounts for the remaining 3%. Ocean water is always saline. Hence, it is not a direct use to man. It is, however, importance as it provides the bulk of water vapour that enters the atmosphere where it forms clouds.
